EXTRACTS.

IMPERFECTION.
She sat, half-shaded from the glare
Of common light—a creature rare
And finished with perfection;
From dark crevices to slender foot,
I looked no mortal eye could part
Disgrace in his inspection.

The angel face they men had praised
I closer scanned, with longing raised,
My steady not concealing;
She wore it with the profound ease,
She felt no need to please,
Such beauty fine revealing.

I wondered if an inner glow
Matched all this loveliness of face,
And used my mortal eye-glass;
Its searching crystal only saw
A mind so free from rust or flaw
That I laid down my eye-glass.

I grew to love her, day by day
She knew it, but she would not say
Was pleased with the new power;
She saw another alter
His heart for her charms control,
And lifted up for a summer.

I was a fool; I sought her heart;
The calm face did not frown or start,
Surprised to see to cover;
She only said, with candid speech,
She really had not meant to teach
Me to become her lover.

I smile to think I have learned
(With long-suffering tolerance)
So little worth discerning;
For now I see, without my glass,
One great defect—well, but it passes;
No heart. Was she worth learning?

A WHOPPER.

An Eastern tourist in Nevada had been spinning some incredible fish yarns, when one of the party, turning to an old mountaineer, said: "Bill, that goes away with fish in this country, don't it?" "Well, I don't know about that," "Do you mean to say that you have caught more and larger fish?" "No; but I have caught some purty big fellers." "Come, now, tell us the weight of the largest trout you ever caught." "Well, I can't exactly tell as to the weight, but you folks can figure on it. Now, you know it is over 200 miles around this lake. Put that down. As I said before, I don't know the weight of the biggest fish I ever yanked out, but I did haul one up on the beach, and after I landed him the lake fell three feet, and you can see by the water mark over yonder it hasn't ris since."—Detroit Free Press.

A CURIOUS EDITOR.

It is not often that you meet an editor with any curiosity. Most of them accept antiquated formulas, and murder facts and words as they come. One exception, however, was a French editor—the editor of a Lyons paper—had a curiosity to know how a person feels when drowning. He therefore put a job on himself. He arranged to come within a hair's breadth of drowning, but was to be pulled up in the nick of time, rolled on a barrel, hauled over the sand, thrumped on the stomach, and otherwise resuscitated. All went well during the first act. He leaped into the water, refused to struggle, and he gradually sank from sight. At the proper moment he was hauled up by a rope, and a legend commenced. This was an occasion where an editor was too smart. They rolled him according to programme, and seven or eight men tried themselves out with rubbing him and hanging him up head downwards, but he was a dead man. He may know how it feels to drown, but he'll never trouble the public with a description of his feelings.

ANECDOTAL PHOTOGRAPHS.

Sir George Ferguson Bowen is a man who could not help getting on in the world. He is one of those lucky persons who, if thrown into a river by an enemy waiting to drown him, would rise to the surface with a cork in each hand. The two qualities which have best served him are self-reliance and docility in bending to hard facts. Sir George has a high spirit, and much native energy. He always felt that there was a good deal in him, and he was not mistaken. If his career had been less brilliant he might have turned out a really great man. In early times he was expected to what an extent England is in the possession of a man. Without ever trucking to those who dispose of official emoluments and titles, he kept in the eye of men whose patronage might be useful. From his youth up he was master of the shibboleth of the governing class, and understood the freemasonry of the Upper Ten. A box-tickler, he fell well under the eye of the Victorian could discover in his armour.—Truth.

GULF AND ARAB HORSES.

The Bombay and Basra steamers begin to be thronged by Arab dealers on their way back to their homes, after having had an unusually good time of it, we are told, this season, in getting rid of their shipments of horses in the Bombay market. These men, of course, are not breeders. They are dealers, and belong to the Arab tribes, whose habitat extends from the Western or Arabian shore of the Persian Gulf up into Mesopotamia. Basra and Kuwait are the chief ports of shipment. At or near the former place, our esteemed townsman of so many years, Esau Buz Curran, now resides. He has not altogether forgotten his old role, and sends a batch of Arabs and to Basra every year, as he trusts, remunerative prices. Perhaps friend Esau himself is only biding his time till he gets hold of a profitable flyer, with which to equip down, in true Arab fashion, on Bazaar turkeys! If so we wish him well. The extent to which steamers of the British India Navigation Company are taking the place of the old Arab sailing boat in the horse-trade between Basra and Bombay is, we believe, on the increase, and as many as fifty or sixty Arab horses are sometimes to be seen on the deck of a Bombay-bound steamer. Fifty rupees being the minimum charge per head for these boys of freight, the cargo is headed enough to prefer the extra expense to the "cheap and nasty" mode of transport. But with from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,200 as the average price obtainable for newly landed Arab horses in the Bombay market, it is not surprising that the demand for the animals is so large. In fact, the demand is so large that the owners of the commission steamer, the Arabia, have been obliged to refuse to take any more of the animals, but have, nevertheless, sold a number of them at a profit. The Arabia is a fine ship, and is well equipped for the service. She is commanded by Mr. J. A. Perkins, who is a very experienced seaman.
